PROVINCIAL FORCE ON THE JOB TODAY

According to a report from Edmonton the Alberta Police begin on their new duties today. The bill creating them has not been passed by the house, but the force commences on March 1st. It will consist of 125 men including a superintendent, an assistant, five inspectors, and the remainder corporals, sergeants, detectives and constables. Ninety-six men have been accepted to date and many have been sent to their detachments.

The bill creating the force allows for the organization of the force and outlines the duties of the force. These include the administration of the various laws, and inspects all members ex-officio inspectors of game, weeds, liquor acts, motor vehicles act, and the acts.

OLD PIONEER SELLING OUT

C. N. Nielsen, one of Craigmyle's most enterprising and up-to-date farmers has sold his large farm in that district and will move to British Columbia. Mr. Nielsen is one of the pioneers of that part of the country and has done a great deal to develop the district during the eight years he has lived there, and has made a great success of the farming business. During the year 1910 he harvested in the neighborhood of 20,000 bushels of grain.

He will hold an auction sale on Tuesday, March 20th, and sell off his entire farm equipment consisting of 30 head of farm horses, 34 head of cattle, 27 hogs, 3 full outfitts of farm machinery and household goods. For complete list see posters.

LOCAL STOCKMEN PURCHASE IMPORT-ED PERCHERON

D. H. McDermid and S. I. Hume arrived home the first of the week with the famous imported Percheron Stallion, "Marquis," purchased from Messrs. Upper Bros. of Calgary. This horse has stood at the head of their purchased herd for the past four years, with excellent results, some of his colts being prize winners at the Brandon exhibition, in a class of twelve. He is a beautiful steel gray, weighing upwards of a ton, and stockmen will have the full assurance of the former owners and other stockmen who have benefited from his services, that Marquis is an extra good reliable improver of stock.

Siberia a Dream of Wealth

Is Believed to Be the Richest Country in the World

Siberia is believed to day to become the richest country in the world, for it has a natural wealth so diversified, and as yet almost untouched, that it may be the old world. How vast this wealth is described by A. Kammer.

Forgers in Siberia were producing 1,000,000 to 1,300,000 tons of flour a year. As a grazing country it has no limits and it exports large quantities of live stock, furs, timber. Its forests are almost inexhaustible, and its supplies run to all the others.

Its mineral wealth is also great, at the greater part of the country has never been prospected.

But there are several enormous deposits of oil, that of Kousentz can bring 16,000,000 barrels a year, estimated to contain 90,000,000 tons of oil; that of Irkutsk, estimated to contain 100,000,000 tons, and the Leningrad and Strelapalinsk. Some of these have as yet scarcely been touched.

The Kounash basin possesses also great deposits of iron ore, estimated to contain 16,000,000 tons in many other respects.

Other metals that promise wealth to their explorers are copper (5,600 tons), which were mined in 1913, gold (1,000,000 tons), silver, wolfram, antimony, cinchona, mercury, sulphur, saltpeter, graphite, tin, quartz, copper, lead and sulphuric acid, white clay and common salt.

Its furs are an full as those of British Columbia, which flux, cotton and many cereals are grown in a virtually unbroken

A Difference

There is a curious difference between the order issued by the German general to his troops and the order issued by General Macmillan to the French troops. Both are calls to further fighting; but the emperor's order is couched in terms of new sacrifices, while the French general speaks of brilliant successes at the head of his army, and says his men will make 1917 a year of victory. Is it a difference of race that makes the difference of tone—but half Express.

"Open the window, waiter. I am just roasting!" a customer exclaimed who had just dined at a restaurant. "Still, when you have frozen, protacted a man who had just sat down."

The waiter heeded. The proprietor settled the dispute at once. "Oby the customer who has not yet dined," he said.

A Pleasant Healthful Habit

A daily ration of Grape-Nuts and cream is a splendid food for those who want vigor and energy.

Grape-Nuts

is a concentrated health-food made from choice whole wheat and mated barley. It retains the vital mineral elements of the grain so essential to thorough nourishment of body and brain, but lacking in many other cereal foods.

Every table should have its daily ration of Grape-Nuts.

The Issue of the Twentieth Century

Henry A. Wise Wood, in the New York Tribune

This issue of the twentieth century has now been declared, and is apparent.

Two orders of civilization are contending for mastery—Teutonic and Anglo-Saxon. At its end, which shall prevail? We have seen that, despite the Anglo-Saxon civilization in the Eastern Hemisphere has but narrowly escaped destruction. Let us consider ourselves what would have become of it had Great Britain lacked but a few thousand men to add to her army, brink, when upon less than a million men of mixed blood depended the freedom of the world. What would have become of the Anglo-Saxon race in Europe?

A glorified Germany, revelling in her achievements of might, still in the hands of her military caste—what a spectacle! The Americans, who are possessed of a third of the world's wealth and resources, are the only nation that has protection over the whole of Pan-Americanism. A world's treasure, under the protection of the United States, hemisphere, protected by what?

Because of the foregoing, it is most important that we should be at the point of our eventual security for us to be able to make the peace and quietness that is arising the charge of victory?" I say, not!

GREAT BRITAIN HAS PROFITED BY THE MISTAKES OF THE PAST

NOW APPLYING LESSONS LEARNED FROM FAILURES

The Growth of the Fighting Machine Constituted by the Army Has Been Little Short of Marvelous, and All Resources of The Empire Have Been Mobilized for Supreme Effort

Ed. L. Keen correspondent of the United Press in London, reviews the year 1916 as follows:

"In 1916 we spent a good portion of the year in the lessons he learned the previous year.

From the Dardanelles to Mesopotamia, from Gallipoli to Loos, from Soissons to Athens, he blundered along, but, a subsequent history has demonstrated that his mistakes were not errors. Out of every strategic failure, every uninsured expectation, both military and political, he has learned something, and the lessons stuck.

Each of all the losses of the year power in the direction of war, of national government, of domestic economy, of foreign policy. He learned, let him to put David Lloyd George into a practical dictatorship over all those branches of British activity.

The Amritsar Cannon fell because Britain had not learned the lesson which taught India that little circumstances demanded supreme efficiency in execution. The fall of the Amritsar Cannon was of precedent, that he, however, was a new government, and had been provided. Today there are no guns, a shell or a cartridge, left unhandled in the world.

The general output of heavy artillery has increased by several hundred thousand men, while the number of gunners has increased to nearly four million, of whom half a million are trained.

Practically the whole of England's vast industrial resources, except those which are the property of civil population, have been mobilized for war purposes.

Every factory in the country is devoted at least part of its activities to turning out war material.

The production of ships, finished by America and Japan has been almost negligible.

Morover, England has more ships than she can possibly use, having supplied her own big armada.

It has had to help out Russia, France and Italy, and, though it has been largely due to English guns and English shells that the Germans on the defensive. Large quantities of English munitions were sent to France, and, though the German army would doubtless still be fighting for Monastir had it not been re-equipped by Great Britain.

Giving all due credit to the General Staff, the German General Goss-Haig's military genius in particular, as well as the admiral Imperial Admiral Tonnoir, the naval commander, and the permanent superiority of the British air service, after all, only accounts for the recent successes along the Somme and the Aisne.

The reasons for the success have been well learned.

guts, heavy artillery and high explosives. Now these conditions are all reversed. More than 4,000 private gunners, or 95 per cent. of whom before the war had never fired a gun, a shell or a cartridge, have produced a ton of gunpowder, and the result stands in Europe.

Everyone is being made to do his duty to the best of his ability, and every man is being taken to the shed as waste paper and consequently had themselves to work.

As a secret service agent, I was only interested in that part of the campaign which concerned the eleven new governments and had been provided.

Today there are no guns, a shell or a cartridge, left unhandled in the world.

The weekly output of heavy artillery is now millions than England's entire annual output before the war.

A typical gunner may be seen along with a hundred other workers, to set some heavy guns in position on the ground, and then wait.

But we were not allowed to see much. We did not even know that they had an island fort.

We were under the closest supervision.

Services guarded us night and day, and we were not allowed to go down to the town. All

I could learn from the gallery in the fort was that the Germans have literally hacked out of the solid rock the strongest fortress that ever existed.

But I wanted to learn far more than that. It was useless to think that we were not allowed to see much.

So I had to evolve a rather elaborate plan. One day I slipped away from the fort, and, after a few observations, the sentries were far too watchful, and I had a hard time getting back to the fort.

Extrordinary measures are being taken by the allied countries to increase their production.

It is earnestly hoped that every farmer in Canada will strive to increase his output.

Assuming that there is an honest desire for peace in Germany, no progress can be made until the people of the responsible statesmen of Germany some of the time and some of the Germans all of the time, but is a preliminary to peace conferences.

For dynamic results it is necessary that the German people realize that they have won the war and that any peace which Germany may propose will be a victory for them. They will be no peace on that basis.

British Spy's Feat In Island Fortress

Hellsgoland's Secret No. 5
Clever Capt.-Thrilling Story of Narrow Escape

Hellsgoland was British in 1890. It was just a lump of waste rock of no particular use to anybody, except sea birds, who were numerous, and it is the most strongly fortified place in the world. The islands cover about 200 feet above the level of the sea, and the southern corner thereof are the two shore ends of Hellsgoland, situated in the middle of the North Sea.

Everybody who was on board had to make sure that everybody understood what "verbotten means."

As a secret service agent, I was only interested in that part of the campaign which concerned the eleven new governments and had been provided.

Today there are no guns, a shell or a cartridge, left unhandled in the world.

Everyone is being made to do his duty to the best of his ability, and every man is being taken to the shed as waste paper and consequently had themselves to work.

As a secret service agent, I was only interested in that part of the campaign which concerned the eleven new governments and had been provided.

To me, the island fort was a prison, but we were not allowed to see much. We did not even know that they had an island fort.

We were under the closest supervision.

Services guarded us night and day, and we were not allowed to go down to the town. All

I could learn from the gallery in the fort was that the Germans have literally hacked out of the solid rock the strongest fortress that ever existed.

But I wanted to learn far more than that. It was useless to think that we were not allowed to see much.

So I had to evolve a rather elaborate plan. One day I slipped away from the fort, and, after a few observations, the sentries were far too watchful, and I had a hard time getting back to the fort.

Extrordinary measures are being taken by the allied countries to increase their production.

It is earnestly hoped that every farmer in Canada will strive to increase his output.

Break for Freedom

How the Plan of Two Interned German Officers Nearly Succeeded

An ingenious method of escape was employed by two German officers who had been interned in a British camp, but were subsequently arrested and brought back. It appears that the two officers had been in the British camp for about three months, and had been allowed to wander over the grounds.

When the orders came to wheel the stores and supplies to a store shed outside the grounds, the two officers had managed to get hold of a sled and a piece of timber.

They had cut a hole through the sled and had managed to get hold of a piece of timber.

Plans for the Next War

Germany Making Plans for Another War When She Is Better Prepared

A very useful commentary upon Germany's peace preparations is furnished by the representative here with which appeared in December in the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin, a semi-official newspaper:

"We began the war last year with a small force, but secured German peace we must begin at once a reorganization upon a broader basis. We must organize our forces in such a way that they produce raw materials essential to the army must not only be obtained through imports, but also be produced through our own industries, forming thus the economic base for the next war."

"We must carefully calculate in advance, in what way our country lacks in raw materials or essentials of war, and then remain in reserve to remain until a day in the future. We must organize as far as possible our industry, and the army must not only be supplied with food, but also with clothing, arms and ammunition, so that we can bring into play all our resources."

"We must finally establish some definite plans for organizing our forces with the nations outside. Even if we offer them advantages to be duly appreciated, we must not be afraid to sacrifice our own interests in order to gain those of others. We must not be afraid to offend our neighbors, but we must be prepared to defend ourselves."

"The Imperial Government would individualize most liberal terms of peace if it could be certain that the German people would accept them. What the German people are actually fighting for is not a German victory, but a peace that will be temporary, and that they will not be tempted to revolutionize their government to obtain it. We must be prepared to know it, but they may rest assured that the Kaiser and his government will be able to withstand any attack from the outside."

WHEN YOU WOULD A SPORTING GO

The Wide Ribbed Sweater a Novelty

A Smart Walking Suit With Scarf Attached

IF YOU would be a sport and would a-sporting go, it behooves you to see that the costume you wear, under the circumstances, is in keeping with the dictates of fashion and with the affair of the hour.

Every woman who enjoys sports, al fresco or indoors, whether as an active participant or an interested onlooker, must own a sweater. It has been proved that silk sweaters may come and silk sweaters may go, but wool sweaters cling forever. To insure their hold, they appear in new colors, new designs and new cuts at frequent intervals. At present the brushed-wool sweater is occupying a seat in the front row and is receiving hearty applause. A very pretty model of this material is the one of bright green trimmed with angora collar and cuffs. The practical hat is of green wool trimmed with a band of white ribbon.

Because of their smartness, striped effects remain popular. At any rate, the so obviously belted sweater with a wide strip of knitted wool is in blue-and-white stripes. The deep sailor collar and the cuffs repeat the single-color idea. The hat worn with the sweater is of blue felt. White ribbon and white embroidery are used as trimming.

Among the newest sweaters are those showing a wide rib weave. An illustration is seen in the rich brown model of the fashionable brushed wool.

While all three sweaters are shown with belts to match, on any one of them might be worn a patent-leather belt. Thus the wearer would be displaying several style features at one appearance.

Knitted in Two Tones and Obviously Belted

If only the check were a plaid, the wearer of the green-and-black suit would more strongly suggest the Scotch dress. As it is, the stick and the scarf savor of the bonnie land. The suit is of a durable novelty mixture. Black velvet bands ornament the cuffs and the scarf, which, by the way, is attached to the coat, being a continuation of the collar. Each scarf end is finished with silk fringe.

Particularly chic for the club is the suit of heavy jersey cloth in a delicate pink shade. The long line of the coat carries out one of fashion's strong edicts. The hood collar, the tassel and the odd belt arrangement are details which give character to the suit. Smoked pearl buttons are used for decorative as well as useful purposes.

RED CROSS NOTES

Red Cross Catechism: Question, V. What will happen if everybody in Canada subscribes generously to the Red Cross? Answer: The necessary suffering will be saved by a sufficient supply of all hospital supplies and drugs which will be turned to the ranks instead of being invaluable and others who might never have seen home again will be returned to the arms of their families.

It has been estimated that in this war over 75% of those men wounded in every possible manner, and in every degree of severity, recover. This is due to the skill and efficiency of the Red Cross people and their equipment.

The brave first aid men go out to gather in the wounded almost entirely after nightfall when they can approach unobserved. Imagine the joy that the wounded soldier must feel at the sight of the one who will give him first aid and take him back to receive proper care. Thousands of grateful soldiers have spoken enthusiastically of the treatment they have received when recovering from their wounds. There is a terrible wastage to the war with increasing casualty lists and the continual battle line, but the part of Canadian women. Let the women of this district continue to work with renewal vigor for this the greatest cause of the present day.

The dance supper held on Friday Feb. 23, enabled the ladies to add $11.35 to their funds.

The Red Cross takes great pleasure in acknowledging the following donations for general Red Cross purposes: $5 from Mrs. J. B. Mitchell; $2 from Mrs. Watson; 60¢ from Mrs. Lynes; for Prisoners of War Fund, $3 from Mr. Ed Welch for Dec., Jan. and Feb. Also 1 pair of socks from Miss Green and 3 pairs from Mrs. Findlay.

How about the fire insurance on your home? Call on Mr. C. Jackson, Co. agent renewing it for you. On farm buildings $1.10 per $100 for three years.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 16 years of age, may apply for land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Apply to the Dominion Land Agency or Sub-agency in your district. Applications may be made at any Dominion Land Agency, but not at the office of the Provincial Surveyor.

Buties—small residential plots and cultivation plots. A butie holder may live within nine miles of his home, or in a town or village, or in a butie. A habitable house is required except in certain cases where the holder may live in a tent.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may apply for a butie, and if he does so, he may not be required to settle his homestead. Price 20¢ per acre, for three years after clearing homestead patent and 10¢ per acre thereafter. A butie holder may not be required to cultivate his land, or certain conditions may be imposed.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction if the holder fails to cultivate his land, and such land may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.
